National Civil War Museum Advisory Council Member

| Member Contact | Organization | Location |
|--|-------------------------------|-----------------|
| S. Waite Rawls, III President & CEO | The Museum of the Confederacy | Richmond, VA |

Waite has been the President and CEO of The Museum of the Confederacy since 2004. Formerly, he spent 30 years in the investment banking business in New York and Chicago. Additionally, he has been an Adjunct Professor at the Illinois Institute of Technology and a Visiting Professor at the Darden School (University of Virginia), concentrating on the derivatives and capital markets.

Mr. Rawls is a Trustee of the Camp Foundation, a member of Virginia's Robert E. Lee Commission, a former Trustee of the Civil War Preservation Trust and of the Jamestown-Yorktown Foundation, a former Trustee and President of the Alumni Association of the Darden School, and a former member of the Board of Visitors of the Virginia Military Institute.

A native of Franklin, Virginia, he joined the Franklin Civil War Roundtable at age 9. He has a BA from the Virginia Military Institute and his MBA and JD from the University of Virginia.

The Museum of the Confederacy has a rich collection of civilian and military Civil War artifacts relating to the Confederate States of America, as well as the post-war "Lost Cause" era, is a valuable resource for the study of the role of the Confederacy in the War and in our society today.

The Museum organizes and sponsors a variety of lectures and other special events and programs. A new publication exploring a particular portion of the Museum's ever-growing collection in-depth is published annually. The Museum also produces a semi-annual newsletter with articles taking on many topics and issues surrounding the period of the Confederacy and effects on our society today.

For more information, visit www.moc.org