The National Civil War Museum announces a
New Initiative for 2017
“Lessons in History Civil War Speaking Program”

(Harrisburg, PA) – The National Civil War Museum announces Historian James Hessler will be the first speaker for the NCWM’s new 2017 initiative “Lessons in History Civil War Lecture Series.” Join James Hessler as he presents “Major Marcus Reno: From Harrisburg to Little Bighorn” Saturday, January 28, 2017 1:00pm-2:00pm in the Education Gallery, first floor.

Marcus Reno is best remembered for his controversial role as the senior subordinate officer under George Armstrong Custer at the 1876 battle of Little Bighorn. Although Reno survived that battle with most of his command, he was forever dogged by rumors of drunkenness, cowardice, and failure to support Custer. Reno was later cashiered on charges of being a peeping tom. Lesser known is the fact that Reno had family ties to the Harrisburg area and the National Civil War Museum holds several personal artifacts. Please attend this presentation on Reno's controversial life and view his belongings.

Entrance to this lecture is included in the purchase of museum admission and is free to NCWM members.
